mallee country

Patchewollock is a small town located in North West Victoria on the edge of the Wyperfeld National Park.

Established in 1914, Patchewollock originated from two aboriginal words "putje" meaning plenty and "wallah" meaning porcupine grass. Patchewollock boasts an open country lifestyle and is famous for the "Patche Pub", the local watering hole.

Patchewollock provides an outback experience and is a great base location to explore the surrounding National Parks and Reserves.
